BAIS MEDRASH OF HAVERSTRAW

שבת פרשת בא תשפ"ז

דבר תורה

By: R' Shmuel T. Adler

We all wish we could connect to our Yiddishkeit more. It is challenging. Life is busy and gets stressful at times, there is so much going on around us, and our avodas Hashem can feel monotonous. What is Judaism all about anyways? Rav Aharon Feldman shlita says that it's a quest to connect with God. The Ramban at the end of this weeks Parshas Bo (13:16) spells out succinctly that the crux of our emuna in Hashem all stems from yetzias mitzrayim with all the miracles God performed there. Declares the Ramban, "A person does not have a connection to the Torah without recognizing that nothing happens 'by chance.'" We are so fortunate to be able to have this potential for meaning and spirituality. My non-Jewish, Indian, neighbors, Mr. James and Mrs. James, are now both retired. Literally every few weeks he leaves me a message that they are going on this cruise or that vacation – seriously "chapping arein zechusim" before the olam haemes arrives!!!!

We are surrounded by Hashem's presence - how can we become more cognizant of it? Sometimes even for the most atheistic of people, all they need is a more authentic approach, such as can be seen in the following illuminating story involving my dear heilige amazing twin brother. As an introduction: Rabbi Avrohom Eliezer Adler gives each of his classes an assignment on self awareness. The teenage students are guided to take a few moments to reflect, and answer questions such as "What are your aspirations in life? Do you have any spiritual aspirations? Please explain." Over the years he got various intriguing answers; once, a young man who my brother heard constantly expressing his skepticism about Judaism having any meaning or value, wrote, "No, he has no spiritual aspirations", but he didn't write-in the explanation portion for this! Very wisely, my brother insisted that everything needs to be filled out, and the response requires elucidation. Over the next few days, all the student would say is that "it's complicated;" until finally after a lot of cajoling he conceded – he does have spiritual aspirations, he plans to read a book about Judaism! . . . Fast forward later that year. A gemara came up in shiur which mentions "elokai netzor", and this boy commented that he's not familiar with what tefilla that is. The young man shared in confidence that shmoneh esrei is too long, and he doesn't really say the words! My brother enlightened him that prayer is all about talking to God and it can be in any language!, and brilliantly suggested to his struggling disciple to simply take a moment "and just talk to God in English; ask Him or thank Him for something." The next day the boy came over privately, asking what is the minimum one could say during tefilla; his Rebbe showed him the first bracha of shmo'e and modim, and after he could add a personal tefilla. There were a number of conversations the student initiated with Rabbi Adler, and all the while throughout these interactions my brother had doubts if his words were making any impact, bearing in mind how often this student had said in the past that religion was not worth his effort. Yet when a Rebbe truly loves and believes in his talmid, the unbelievable could happen! A few days later, this yearning bochur approached and said, "Rabbi, I want to say a secret that no one else will hear;" Very proudly he shared "Rabbi, I must tell you that this has been the first two days in my entire life that I actually talked to God!" The young man's face was filled with pride, lit up with a huge broad smile gracing his face! "Did it feel good to pray", asked my brother? "YES", came the assertive, effusive, response!, his talmid's head bouncing up and down in crystal clear affirmation. Indeed, Hashem exists, and certainly not "a waste of time to get to know Him!" ... Don't Start Up With Rabbi Avrohom E. Adler shlit'a!
